

May The (Third) Be With You!

May brings with it spring weather, allergies, and the apex of my power. Yes, it's Star Wars day this month - unless you're me, and then every day is Star Wars day. But that doesn't mean I'm not hard at work on all my various projects.

Did you know this is also the height of Jonathan Harker's power? You might think it's Halloween (because black cat,) but it is actually the start of Dracula season. The character of Jonathan Harker's first diary entry is dated May 3!

Inching Closer To Reveals

Beachouse Studios has been out for several months now. I'm delighted with the reception the first book in the saga has received! If you haven't read it, you should definitely check out the Geeky Waffle's official review of it. (And just check out the Geeky Waffle in general, they're rad.) If you read and enjoyed it, please be sure to leave a review on your preferred site, but especially Amazon, as that helps the series at this early stage.

There is a ton more to come with the series. Book 4, the one I'm currently drafting, definitely marks a change in the series, and one I'm excited for folks to get to. There's plenty to do before we get there, of course, especially surrounding the second book, Second Shoot. Editing continues on it, and I'm liking the changes being made to really bring out the characters and set up future twists and turns. The cover is also crystalizing! I hope to be able to reveal shortly when the book will go up for preorder, and we can return to Dan, Ry, and two new POV characters.

If you're curious how progress is going in between newsletters, I've been posting a lot more writing updates to my threads account.

Completing The Mission

I cannot recommend For Light And Dice enough. I say that because I recorded a breakout session with a single other player and the DM a few weeks ago, and I can confidently say it's some of the best improved acting/writing I've ever been a part of. The podcast as a whole is incredible, with complex characters and amazing worldbuilding by the DM, but sometimes a moment just sticks with me, and this session had several of them. Trust me, you want to be caught up.

Over on Gold Squadron Gays, we've begun our coverage of the third and final season of The Bad Batch. This has been a great season, but I do have some issues.

As always, I love getting to use my training to talk about Star Wars, a thing I love. Have I mentioned I love Star Wars? I feel like that might be relevant this month.

Summer Draws Near...

This month is going to be full of Star Wars events and work from me (I didn't even mention that myself and my co-podcaster are going to Japan for Star Wars Celebration next year!) but summer is definitely looming on the horizon. Hopefully, it'll bring with it some announcements sooner rather than later, but for now, may the Force be with you!

Charles Rogers

